

TOMMY MANNING

UX Logo Design

Tommy Manning

Methods and Purpose

M

Asked friends similar to my age that are all college educated students that are not in majors surrounding design and arts

Asked them questions that engaged them on visceral, behavioral, and reflective levels in order to understand or better recognize how the design is seen and experience by an outside user and what part of the design effected them in certain way

P

To understand the perspectives of those who were not part of the creative process and how they experience my creations in a way that works to make the design and creation more intuitive, efficient, and meet the user where they need to meet in terms of a captivating and appropriate design for these logos.

S

Senior

Female

Pitt Student

Major: Biology; Pre-dental track

J

Senior

Male

Pitt Student

Major: Computational Biology

Dad is a graphic designer

B

Sophomore

Male

Pitt Student

Major: Political Science

Participants

Participant Insights

Overall

Pro's

Modern

Sleek

Intentional

Colors worked well together

Con's

Too much put into the design going on in the first and second

Use of different fonts and sizes was took away more than adding

They made the participant think of things I was not intending

Quotes

"calming, like, beige, like, yeah, like modern ish color."

"too broad, simplistic"

"I would actually say that most of them are the majority of them are too specific and far too, you know, like, complicated."

"candles, bridal dress, sure. Yeah. The third one, I think, is very, it's very clear cut. I think it would be associated with something very like high like, high class, like, a very, like, very good men's brand of some"

"I don't know it is visually interesting, not in an appealing way"

"I would say it's pretty much perfect, yeah"

Participant B

- “Okay, the beige ish on the left is, like, not really eye catching, yeah. And when it's caught, like these, like, sort of small white lettering, it's just hard to read.”
- “provide too many extra details, or too many extra things,”
- “I would say the first two. I would just simplify them. Yeah, more I take away some of the more, like, unnecessary detail, sure”

Participant J

- “First feeling is, don't know what's happening in the first one, okay.”
- “too complicated in ways.”
- “there's way too many differences that it sure it distracts”

Script

What was your first feeling when you saw the logo?

What is your immediate reaction to the colors in each of these logos?

Where are your eyes drawn to when looking at these logos (is it the colors, the font, the usage of the logo shape)

Are the logos too broad or simplistic?

If this design were on a storefront, what kind of business would you expect it to be? Would you buy from this business?

How would you describe the logo to someone who has not seen it? Does it seem intentional?

What would you change about these logos to better represent who I am and what I want to get across?

Thank You

Transcripts:

<https://docs.google.com/document/d/1xF6Adn1pTNUBwc8T1VJMtqLsDXoQEUppgP5JuL8U1FE/edit?usp=sharing>